SUBJECT: OPERATION MAJESTIC-12 PRELIMINARY BRIEFING
PREPARED: 08 JANUARY 1989
BRIEFING
OFFICER: NJ-1

NOTE: This document has been prepared as a preliminary briefing only. It should be regarded as introductory to a full operations briefing intended to follow.

OBJECTIVES.

OPERATION MAJESTIC-12 (MAJIC-12 or NJ-12) is a ABOVE TOP SECRET Research and Development/Intelligence operation responsible directly and only to the President of the United States. Operations of the project are carried out under control of the MAJIC-12 Group which was established by special classified executive order # 092447 of President Truman on 24 September 1947, upon recommendation by Dr. Vannevar Bush and Secretary of Defense James Forrestal.

Objectives of the Group include the evaluating of risk, control and containment of the violation of United States air space and of national security by unknown and possibly hostile aliens of one or more advanced races of beings presumed to have originated elsewhere than on the planet Earth. The development of effective countermeasures and the application of any scientific or technical discoveries made during the operations is also of the highest concern. The following are some established aspects of the situation:

- Advanced beings of non-human nature are continuously being detected along with their flying-disc craft in the controlled space of the U.S. since 07 July 1947.
- The remains of seven (7) flying craft and the bodies of twenty-seven (27) deceased non-human beings have been recovered as of this briefing date, and are at present being studied by MAJIC-12 scientists.
- Three of the recovered craft are nearly intact and one such machine has maintained some of its power since retrieval in 1968.
- Since 1957, no additional alien craft have been available for study. The statement is that these beings have adapted or perfected the machines to the conditions of our world, so as to avoid any further such revealing crashes.

HISTORY

At the history of the MAJIC-12 Group and its membership and investigation, (No complete records are available with proper clearance through the office of counterintelligence of the DEFENSE INTELLIGENCE Agency and the on microfilm at this time. The written minutes and transcripts of all directorate meetings as well as a full record of all investigations in their original form are located at the MAJIC-12, command "Bigler Command" and situated at the decommissioned Marine Air Station at Flat Rock, Nevada. This site is now under the control of the Nevada Nuclear Regulatory Commission, the story being to a considerable extent that this base is involved in the long-term monitoring of residual radiation levels that resulted from the A-bomb test in the 1950's. With the exception of a monitoring team sent to Bigler-Anderson Air Force Base, for the sending up of all pertinent records through the Dept. of the Air Force, all gathering operations are now located at the Nevada site. Over a period of years, all recovered evidence from the crashed alien craft has been transported to a warehouse storage at Flat Rock, making full use of the large complex of fallout shelters built there starting in 1954.

Scientific and technical research and analysis for MAJIC-12 is being conducted at several points around the country. Small monitoring units remain in place within the command structure of certain other branches of the armed forces. These include NORAD in Colorado and SAC in Nevada for reporting of radar sightings, and SEACOM in Virginia and SACCOM in California for reporting of Naval encounters. The aerospace program is being carried out by the Goddard Space Research Center in California, for reporting of rocket encounters. The Alabama and Tennessee studies are conducted at NASA's Ames Research Center in California. A team from Johns-Hopkins University and the National Institute of Health is conducting the biological and medical intelligence gathered by the project.

Just as the title implies, MAJIC-12 is headed by a directorate of two persons chosen for life for until retirement), six are military and one is a civilian position, and six are private sector scientists and engineers with long histories of governmental affiliations. All directorate members are filled by a unanimous vote of seated members of the directorate after an appointment, but while all are permanent, they may be removed by that group. Such rotation of duties is fully elected solely by that group. Such rotation of duties is a long-standing historical decision based on the generalization that there is no person better qualified to do a job than the person who has done it. Only from within such a family is it possible to have a vote of the "special interest" required for this very sensitive kind of work. It has been said by a former director of the group that the understanding of alien minds requires an alien mind.

EYES ONLY

The organizational structure of OPERATION MAJESTIC-12 is arranged into three (3) tiers or levels, by order of a need-to-know information flow process. These are:

- DIRECTORATE - Composed of twelve members, sharing equal authority and complete access to all information. The President is accepted to be the third-in-command of this body, as well as its final authority.
- TASK UNITS - Composed of a variable number of scientific and information gathering groups and/or persons. The complete listing of current consultants in the complete listing is available on request. Identifiers of military monitoring units and individuals must be requested through the directorate.
- ENFORCEMENT - Composed primarily of selected recruits from the Army Special Forces Command. These units are organized into Companies known as "Blue Berets" and are trained and supported by Air Cavalry units based out of BIGGER COMMAND in Flat Rock, Nevada. Purpose includes containment of tactical situations, control of public awareness, panic, evacuation, etc. originally created for the security of recovery rights during investigations and the transporting of sensitive evidence. Also includes a number of plainclothes operatives whose purpose is the spread of cover stories to avoid public fear about the inability of the Government to control the situation. These members also operate diversions for civilian investigators to discourage such efforts so as to aid in control of public information and interest.

NOTE: The identities of the directorate, MAJIC-12 are held in the strictest secrecy. They are known only to each other and to the seated President of the United States. These names are never to be written down.

The purpose and need for the highly covert and ABOVE TOP SECRET designation of this operation will become apparent with the study of the following reports which led to the forming of OPERATION MAJESTIC-12. Since the time of these events, over forty years ago, the state of our science has advanced to the degree that we may see a measure of short-sightedness in the then-radical actions of the administration. As a result of actions taken at that time, several sensitive developments have resulted which are of ever-increasing concern to the National Security of the United States of America.

ROSWELL, NEW MEXICO
(07 JULY, 1947)

On 07 JULY, 1947, a secret operation was begun to assure recovery of the wreckage of an unidentified flying object which had crashed at Roswell, New Mexico. The object was downed approximately 1000 feet above the fields adjacent to the Roswell Army Air Station (later Walker Field). The area was restricted to authorities there by a local rancher. During the search for the wreckage, aerial reconnaissance discovered that the debris had been scattered in a field. The wreckage was located at a spot near the field it had exploded. These had fallen to earth about two miles east of the crash site where the wreckage was located. All of the crew members were dead and badly decomposed due to action of bacteria and enzymes in the elements during the approximately one week which had elapsed prior to their recovery. A special scientific team, composed of the recovery of the bodies and the recovery of the wreckage of the craft. Civilian and military witnesses in the area were interviewed and every recorder was given the effective cover story that a classified weather balloon was responsible for the sighting.

A covert organization of secret organizations by General Nathan F. Twining and Dr. Raymond French acting on the direct orders of President Harry S. Truman, resulted in a preliminary consensus (19 September, 1947) that the wreckage of the craft was more likely a short range reconnaissance craft. This conclusion was based for the most part on the craft's size and the apparent lack of propulsion. A similar analysis of the four decomposed specimens was reported by Dr. Taylor Brown. It was the tentative conclusion of the group (20 November, 1947) that although these specimens are generally considered to be human, the biological and evolutionary processes followed for their development has apparently been quite different from those reported or postulated in homo-sapiens (earth human). Dr. Brown's team suggested the term, "homo-sapiens" (earth human). "homo-sapiens" (biological facilities), or "homo-sapiens" for these creatures. While such a term as a species definition is not agreed upon, it was the consensus of the scientists involved in the investigation that this craft and its contents were certainly did not originate with the government of any nation on the earth.

The crash near Roswell occurred sometime in the evening of 2/3 July 1947. At about 20:00 hours at least two dozen persons in the area observed a bright yellow or "tan colored" disc-shaped object over the area. On 3 July 1947, in the early afternoon, the widely scattered wreckage was discovered by local ranch manager William Brazel and his son and daughter. The authorities at the Roswell Field Army Air Force Base were alerted by Mr. Brazel at 09:18 of 07 July, 1947 and two officers of the base were guided to the crash site by the ranch manager. These were Major Jesse Marcel, staff intelligence officer of the 509th Bomb Group Intelligence Office, and Captain Lee Corns of the Counter-Intelligence Corps.

When the two officers returned to Roswell Field with samples of the crash site material, they immediately reported to Colonel William Blanchard of Air Technical Command. It was at this point that the first of many decisions were made that have gone into the historical posture of this government's position on the public's need-to-know about the situation. Colonel Blanchard released an official press statement confirming that wreckage of a flying disc had been recovered. This was phoned in to an Albuquerque, New Mexico radio station without approval from higher level command in the Army Air Corps. Indeed, no one in the Pentagon or anywhere else was notified or consulted prior to the release of this information.

In defense of Colonel Blanchard's actions, it should be noted that no established procedure on the issue existed at the time. There were no Office of Special Investigations, Central Intelligence Agency, National Security Agency, or Defense Intelligence Agency or any other similar such organizations at that time. It should be noted that within less than two years following this incident, and as its direct result, all of the above agencies were established with the exception of the Defense Intelligence Agency which was established in 1961.

At nearly the same time on the evening of 07 July, two events were taking the incident in widely different directions at widely separated locations. In Roswell, Major Marcel and his son and daughter were reported to have the debris onboard a B-29 aircraft and fly it to Wright Field (now Wright-Patterson AFB) at Dayton, Ohio, for examination. As this was being done, a reporter from the Albuquerque radio station called to Wright Field to confirm the crash with the commanding general there. This was Lt. General Nathan Twining, Air Materiel Command, where any such reported incident should have been filed. In fact, the wreckage and all persons involved were already on their way to Wright Field. But this was the first that General Twining had heard of the matter. Twining was forced to state that he knew nothing of a crashed disc craft.

Upon finally receiving verbal confirmation by open telephone line Colonel Blanchard of Roswell Field, General Twining did three things rapid order in an effort to contain the situation. First, he sent a teletype to the press at Roswell, instructing them to do nothing and talk to no one until further orders from him. Second, he used the same system to contact General Roger Ramey, who was in command at Roswell Army Air Force Base (HQ: 4th Air Force), and General Ramey, ordering him to direct Major Marcel to vector a plane for an immediate stop at Roswell, which was on his flight path. General Ramey was instructed to: A. remove the recovered debris from the crash site and place it aboard another in sealed crates to be forwarded to Wright Field, O., order Marcel and his crew not to talk to reporters. C. Notify the press of a photo conference to be held at Roswell where an explanation would be given. D., state at the conference that the wreckage was only the remains of a weather balloon and its attached helium balloon and presidentially display created evidence of same. E. Return Major Marcel to the messrooms at the two Albuquerque radio stations and have them to cause transmission of the original story and to contact the office of Public Information for the correct release. Finally, a general board of a plane and flew directly to Roswell Field in New Mexico.

At his arrival in Roswell, General Twining relieved Colonel Blanchard and ordered troops to set up a secured perimeter around the crash site. He then personally supervised the total policing of the area and removal of all remaining evidence, as well as the four day briefing of Major Marcel and the six day debriefing of another pilot on the held incommunicado until the clean-up was complete.

The wreckage recovered at Roswell consisted of three hundred and fifty-seven (357) fragmented pieces of various structural alloys. Most of these were about the size of many lengths and ranging in diameter from just over half an inch, to just under two inches. They were found to be composed of a very light and porous metal alloy of extremely fine structure and silicon mixed with aluminum and magnesium crystalline structure. The bones were flexible and were tolerably unaffected by both oxygenation and electrolytic blowing tests. Several of these contained microscopic and alpha-beta particles of uranium and lead and their surfaces. Also found were many other particles of the same nature. The material presumed to have been the outer casing of the craft built, or skin.

Following the discoveries near Roswell, New Mexico it became obvious to the intelligence officers working under the newly appointed Secretary of Defense, James V. Forrestal, that a special operations group was going to be needed to coordinate the accumulation & dissemination of data on this subject. This became known as the Roswell-12 Group when President Harry Truman chartered them in September, 1947.

The original directorate of the Group were as follows:

- Dr. Lloyd Berkner - Scientist and Executive Secretary of the Joint Research and Development Board in 1946 (under Dr. Vannevar Bush). Also headed the special committee to establish the Weapons System Evaluation Group. Was Scientific Consultant to the Central Intelligence Agency on UFO's during his years with Roswell-12.

- Dr. Detlev Bronk - Internationally known physiologist and biologist who was chairman of the National Research Council and the Medical Advisory Board of the Atomic Energy Commission (later, Nuclear Regulatory Commission). Also, Chairman of the Scientific Advisory Committee of the Brookhaven National Laboratory.

- Dr. Vannevar Bush - Recognized as one of the United States leading scientists. Organized the National Defense Research Council in 1941 and the Office of Scientific Research and Development in 1945, which led to the wartime establishment of the Manhattan Project to develop the first atomic bomb. After the war, he became head of the Joint Research and Development Board. Was responsible for the recommendation, along with Secretary Forrestal, to President Truman that the Roswell-12 operation was required. Dr. Bush was a principle organizer of the efforts to bring many German scientists, including Albert Einstein, to the U.S. before and after the war.

- James V. Forrestal - Served as Secretary of the Navy before he became Secretary of Defense under President Truman in July, 1947. Among his first acts as the Defense Secretary was the responsibility for organizing the crash recovery of the flying disc from Roswell, New Mexico, which occurred in the same month he took office. He was the first to approach President Truman about the need for an operation like Roswell-12, and was in charge, along with Dr. Bush, of setting up an international intelligence gathering organization to monitor worldwide UFO activity. The results of these efforts would go to include the Central Intelligence Agency and National Security Agency, both of which were founded shortly after the Roswell and Altec crashes.

As a direct result of circumstances surrounding the Aztec, New Mexico recovery, Secretary Forrestal suffered a mental breakdown in March, 1946. It was admitted to Bethesda Naval Hospital under the cover story of needing a "routine physical check-up". While he was at that facility, he is supposed to have committed suicide by jumping from an upper story window in May, 1946. A special committee of counter-intelligence of the Central Intelligence Agency later concluded that the highest probability scenario involves his having been either drugged, tricked, or pushed into his fatal fall. The presumed reason for this involves details of the Aztec crash which will follow in that section.

• Gordon Gray - Assistant Secretary of the Army at the time of MJ-12 initialization and Secretary of the Army in 1959. In 1950, was appointed as Special Assistant on National Security Affairs to President Truman. In 1951, headed the Psychological Strategy Board for unidentified flying object impact (PSUFOI), under Central Intelligence Agency Director Walter Bedell Smith.

• Vice Admiral Keesee Hiltenthetter - Third Director of Central Intelligence (DCI) from 1947 to 1950. founding Director of the Central Intelligence Agency; established in September, 1947 to direct international information gathering on UFOs. Was covertly placed on the board of directors of the civilian UFO organization, National Investigations Committee on Aerial Phenomena (NICAP) to control their activities and control the release of their information to the public. Was forced to take an early retirement after he broke security making the public statement that "UFOs are real and through a process of official secrecy and ridicule, many citizens are led to believe the unknown flying objects are nonsense." In defense of his position, it must be noted that by this time, the Aztec had depressed and demoralized most of the original members of the investigating group. By 1951-52, MJ-12 had to be entirely reconstructed due to the feelings of many of the detractors that the public had a right to know the facts.

• Dr. Jerome Hunsaker - Aircraft designer and head of the Departments of Mechanical and Aeronautical Engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Chairman of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics. Was in charge of studies of the machined portions of the debris recovered from the crash sites. Expert in X-ray and spectroscopic details analysis.

• Dr. Donald Menzel - Director of Harvard College Observatory and a consultant to the National Security Agency on astronomy. Held a Top Secret Ultra clearance.

• General Robert Montague - Base Commander at the Atomic Energy Commission Installation at Sandia Base, Albuquerque, New Mexico from July, 1947 to February, 1951. Was reassigned and transferred for having a heated disagreement over National Policy of MJ-12 regarding sightings around nuclear research facilities. Felt the risk to the public health was of greater issue than security and control of the situation.

• Rear Admiral Sidney Souers - First Director of Central Intelligence (DCI) from January-June, 1946. Upon initialization of MJ-12, became Executive Secretary of the National Security Council, in order to control domestic security of UFO information. Following the Aztec, New Mexico recovery and related actions, Souers resigned (1950) his position in national security and his commission in the Navy. He was retained as a consultant on security to the Executive Branch.

• General Nathan Twining - The principle "pioneer" for high security in the matter of unidentified flying objects and an opponent of scientific release of data or the involvement of civilian scientists. Twining was an outstanding commander of bombing operations in both the Pacific and European theaters in World War II. In 1945 he was appointed Commanding General of Air Materiel Command, based at Wright Field (later became Project Bluebook) to control and discredit civilian sightings and civilian investigations. Chief proponent of covert investigation and clandestine contact attempts regarding UFOs and the EOs (Extra-terrestrial Biological Entities).

• General Hoyt Vandenberg - After an outstanding career in the Army Air Forces, was appointed the second Director of Central Intelligence in 1946 until May, 1947. Following the Aztec, New Mexico incident, he joined General Twining in supporting the complete nature of releasing any UFO information to the public. When the Air Technical Intelligence Center published its Top Secret "System of the Situation" indicating the belief that UFOs were intercepting in origin, in August, 1948, General Vandenberg ordered the document burned before it could be distributed to government scientists with the required clearance. This was directly related to the excess of the Aztec investigation which began in March of that same year.

It is possible to disclose the identities of the original MJ-12 directorate because they are all deceased. It is necessary in order to understand the climate of confusion and anxiety resulting from the second recovery incident at Aztec, New Mexico in 1948.

On 25 March, 1948 at approximately 16:19 (4:19PM) hours, Houston Standard Time (local time, or LT), a disc-shaped flying machine came down about twelve (12) miles northwest of the small community of Aitec, New Mexico. The controlled landing occurred in a small desert canyon on the private grazing land of a local farmer and rancher.

The approach of the disc was tracked with the aid of three (3) high powered missile tracking radar stations belonging to the recovery network of the White Sands Test Range and located in classified areas of southwest New Mexico. The disc-craft was first observed in violation of the restricted air space of this facility. The disc was flying on a level glide path and when first detected, this track detection reported at about 3,200 feet altitude and a heading from the southwest-to-northeast at about 17:00 hours. Alert that included the scrambling of squadrons of jet interceptors from the nearby Sandia and White Sands bases. Also, Staff A's recent memorandum issued through Operation Majestic, the Commander-in-Chief of Air Defense Command (CICADC) immediately notified Secretary of State General George C. Marshall.

At 17:53 hours LT (5:53PM MST) the disc-craft appeared to lose both speed and altitude at nearly the exact moment that it was triangulated by return squadrons towards their target. At the time, it seemed to be an evasive tactic on the part of the disc-craft. The current assessment is that the microver from these long range radars almost certainly evidenced a change to the power or flight control systems of the disc-craft.

At 18:02 hours LT, the craft dropped below radar some four (4) minutes before the White Sands jet squadron would have reached intercept point (IP) and engaged-to-disc-craft. Estimates later indicated the disc-craft impacted or landed at approximately 18:19 hours LT. The exact position of the landing zone (LZ) was determined within minutes by triangulation of the last radar triangulated tracks and confirmed by a visual fly-over of interceptors from the White Sands base. The LZ-IP was at the bottom of Murt Canyon, a dry wash area about 12.2 miles northwest of Aitec, New Mexico and 2.3 miles northwest of the Gawn Creek bend in the Arlanas River. This was on private land about 1.7 miles north of the state highway and nearly 1/2 mile west of unpaved county road S-141 south.

At 18:26 hours LT (6:26PM MST), on 25 March 1948, the crash site was visually confirmed by the commander of the 1st tactical fighter wing and relayed to the Air Defense Command officer at Sandia Base, Albuquerque, New Mexico. This information was conveyed at once to the CINCAD who contacted Secretary of State Marshall. By 18:35 hours LT, General Marshall had made contact with the Army Air Force's Interplanetary Phenomena Unit (IPU), a section of the Army Counterintelligence Directorate. The IPU was instructed and supported out of nearby Camp Hite, Colorado and was the closest group able to secure, recover, transport and secure a disabled disc-craft. This action was entirely correct in the interval before a NUCLEAR operation could be activated and the preparations of the IPU group while awaiting a MAJICONS crew saved valuable time.

The IFU was ferreted after the Roswell, New Mexico crash recovery and was later absorbed into the enforcement division of OPERATION MUSETTIC at the time that the Department of the Air Force was established as an entity separate from the U.S. Army.

The aircraft was recovered and the LZ declared secured by 22:45 hours LT through the actions of an IFU scout team sent to the Hart Canyon area. Marshall's General Marshall had contacted Dr. Vannevar Bush - scientific head of MAJICOPS - and a Joint IFU/MAJICOPS team was assembled under MJ-12 command for the purpose of investigating and clearing the LZ, or crash site. The local rancher who owned the land and [redacted] were held incommunicado while the field analysis and subsequent clean-up was conducted at Hart Canyon. Visiting with the rancher at that time and planning to hunt for game animals on his land, were the owner of a local radio repair shop plus a unemployed oil hunter and inventor. These last two parties were later to get together and tell their story to a columnist from Bartley Hargrave named Frank Scully. This author later published a book in 1956 detailing parts of the Aztec recovery story. This breach of security was occasioned by the use of a cover story for the IFU/MAJICOPS workers that proved to be ineffective. It was decided to disguise the Aztec efforts as an exploration for oil by a fictional drilling company, a fact that was not in agreement with the knowledge of the unemployed oil hunter who knew that there was no oil in the area. Later both this independent oil hunter and the columnist Scully were discredited by facts lacking to a writer at IFU regarding covert operatives of the MAJESTIC Enforcement Division. This action was unfortunate but very vital in light of the sensational nature of the Aztec discoveries. Fortunately, Scully labeled this fortune hunting attempt as a "scientist" in his book and during the period of the book's sales, this disclaimer was convicted of fraud for trying to peddle a device he claimed would find oil mostly by luck, the security breach noted itself and the book was quickly forgotten with only minor help from MJ-12.

That evening of 15 March, General Marshall ordered ADC off of alert status and requested that they send teletypes to the radar stations advising them that there had been a false alarm. This was an important factor here since the disc-craft had landed intact and had the appearance of having been landed under the control of its operators. No means of entry was immediately available and a report of the IFU scout team considered it possible that some of the crew of the disc-craft might still be alive inside it.

At 01:25 hours LT, 16 March, the team of MJ-12 scientists assembled by Dr. [redacted] at Fort [redacted] Colorado about thirty-five (35) miles northwest of Aztec. All members of IFU and MAJICOPS investigators were then sworn to an ultra-top secret security oath. All national property and identification was left in lockers at Durango and the various medical records retained for the Hart Canyon site. It must be remembered that the helicopter was still in experimental development at this stage and could have the best means of entering the rugged terrain as well as the fact that they would cause far less attention than the noisy and unfamiliar helicopter, which was, however, used to bring in the initial IFU scout team.

In order to fully follow the course of the Aztec, E.M. recovery and investigation it is important at this point to detail the names and backgrounds of the members of the IFU/MAJICOPS team before returning to a chronology of the events at Hart Canyon. Only four of those persons were on the MAJICOPS directorate. These were: Dr. Lloyd Berkner, Dr. Dattler Bronk, Dr. Vannevar Bush, and Dr. Jerome Hunsaker. Their biographies may be found in the preceding file of the Roswell, N.M. incident.

The following were selected by the MJ-12 directorate to accompany the IFU/MAJICOPS recovery team to the Hart Canyon landing sites:

• Dr. Carl A. Helland, Director and senior scientist of the Geophysics and Magnetic Sciences Laboratory of the Colorado School of Mines. Was instrumental in discovering that sections of the Aztec disc-craft were held together by molecular magnetic bonding along finely polished seams and determined a means for its disassembly.

• Dr. John von Neumann, former consultant on the Manhattan Project (atomic bomb) in 1945 and a close personal friend of Dr. S. Bush and Dopenhelm from same. Expert in both mathematics and computing machines. His work on the Aztec disc eventually led to the binary computer language used today in all modern electronic computers.

• Dr. Robert J. Dopenhelm, was Director of the Institute for Advanced Studies at Princeton University from 1947 to 1951 and offered a distinguished period of service during the war as head of the Los Alamos atomic bomb project. Also, was Chairman of the General Advisory Committee of the Atomic Energy Commission (later Nuclear Regulatory Commission). Acting for his friend, Dr. Bush, who had not yet arrived at Aztec, he selected most of the recovery team members and arranged with the U.S. Navy for storage in their facilities at Los Alamos until permanent sites could be prepared.

• Dr. Johann von Roessler, an expert nitrogen chemist whose work led to development of nitrogen mustard gas, nitrogen derivatives leading to Trinitrotoluene (TNT) and devices for the atomic bomb. Originally included as a consultant on the possible need to gain forced entry to the disc-craft by use of high explosives, he eventually worked with Dr. Dattler Bronk on investigating the liquid nitrogen cooled cryogenic suspension system used aboard the disc-craft by its crew members.

Dr. Harle A. Tuve, worked with Bush and Oppenheimer for the Office of Scientific Research and Development (Warheitan Project) during World War Two. Top pioneer in radio-wave propagation in the upper atmosphere. Later was part of the Bell Laboratories team which developed the principles of laser light physics derived from study of systems found aboard the Aztec aircraft.

Dr. Horace van Vlikenberg, was Director of the School of Metallurgy at the University of Colorado, expert in analytical chemistry. Was useful in determining proper materials handling of components of the Aztec aircraft during investigation and disassembly. Later pioneered science of X-ray crystallography, crystal holography and electron microscopic metal analysis as well as the holder of over thirty (30) patents through Arizona State University in metal filter processes. Most of the above were the result of research he began after his analysis of the structural materials of the aircraft.

Although not present during the recovery phase of the Aztec operation at Hart Canyon, it is important we acknowledge the contributions made later by Lambert Callihanes and William Friedmann who are experts in language and cryptographic and cryptanalysis of the writings and symbols found aboard the aircraft and were a degree of understanding of the cryogenic suspension system used to freeze the ship's occupants. Also, Dr. Paul A. Scherrer, whose specialty is refrigeration and nitrogen cooling and pumping equipment played a major role in the recovery of the suspended occupants aboard the aircraft at the first laboratory set up at Los Alamos. Both Callihanes and Friedmann went on to work for GEMMATION MAJESTIC for many years in our covert Operation Section of the Enforcement Division as deep planted agents within the National Security Agency. Dr. Scherrer led an illustrious career as Research and Development Director for Air Research Corp.

The FBI/MJICOPS crew took routes to the Hart Canyon site that avoided main roads, and on arrival they set up road blocks and secured a two (2) mile perimeter around the canyon rim and landing site. In exchange for his access, private land was leased from the former who owned the field in the area. Equipment carrying trucks were camouflaged to look like oil and gas drilling rigs and personnel involved were covered with the name of a fictional oil exploration firm created by MJICOPS for this purpose. Later a fence was constructed around the perimeter of the canyon and bore the name of the oil company and warning of blasting on signs attached to it.

When the time came for removal and restoration of the site, trucks were used that were labeled "High Explosives" and were escorted by Blue Ferris officers in blue uniforms. The cover story which was very effective in keeping the entire area was spread that these trucks were removing large amounts of nitro-glycerine used in blasting during oil explorations. This was the reason given for the "National Guard" escort; that the governor of the state requested the escort to avoid the theft of the explosives.

Shortly after sunrise on 26 March 1946 the FBI/MJICOPS team began operations at the Hart Canyon location. Measurements of the radiation levels around the craft and the landing site were taken and proved negative (i.e., nothing out of the ordinary). Some high concentrations of potassium chloride powder were detected in soil samples surrounding the aircraft. A fine, yellowish dust composed of particles less than five (5) microns in diameter was detected coating the nearby underbrush. Chemical analysis showed that this was composed of sulfurous substances in an unfamiliar combination having extremely highly electro-positive element in the iodide group. It is now known that this was a form of disintegrant automatically discharged by the craft upon any touch down to a planet's biosphere soil. Linear calibration surveys were taken by theodolite (surveyor's transit) and photographs were taken from every possible angle with a Graflex "big" plate camera equipped with special calibration overlay marks to register dimensions on the film. The ship was determined to be 99.983 feet in diameter and 82.638 feet in height, or thickness, including the 2.451 foot extension of the landing pods supporting it off of the ground. These three round, hemispheric pods beneath the craft had obviously been extended from within the hull during a controlled landing effort. These were measured to form the points of an equilateral triangle 22.3 feet on a side, center-to-center and were 16.45 feet each from the epicenter of the craft's bottom hull. Both upper and lower hull surfaces were smooth with no means of entry or even of propulsion immediately in evidence. The hull was the color of dull, unpolished aluminum and was apparently metallic in nature with a normal surface temperature. No seams, hatches, rivets or portholes were obvious. Photographs taken at closer than fifteen (15) feet were found to be blurred. Later, both infrared and magnetic radiation fields were found to surround the craft and were no doubt terrific (iron-based) tools and instruments left within this zone around the craft were found to become magnetized.

Eventually the team crawled across the upper hull surface with access by a scaffold erected around one side of the craft. Upon conducting a close examination, they discovered a small, hairline crack at the base of a slight bulge in the domed top of the upper hull. Careful study determined this crack to be irregular enough as to be a result of accidental impact with a solid object (such later a civilian witness was debriefed in Albuquerque who testified that he observed the craft strike the side of a cliff along the south bank of the Animas River at about the same time the power ship dropped below radar). After banging on the hull and yelling through a loudspeaker failed to receive any response from the presumed occupants of the aircraft, it was decided to attempt to widen this crack in an attempt to gain entry. At first the discussion was held as to the possibilities of the craft's internal atmosphere being explosive or that our air could be poison for the occupants to breathe. Finally, Dr. Bush used all such debate on the grounds that if some action was not taken immediately, any chance for survival of members of the ship's crew would have been lost.

First hand from blowpipes was applied in excess of ten thousand (10,000) degrees and finally disintegrated drill bits were used until the crack was at last extended longitudinally and finally widened into a gap great enough to show a small electric light inside and look around. Another pile of material of similar construction seemed to be solidly blocking the view. However, at a seam along the bottom edge of the panel, another breach was located. It was then assumed that the craft was constructed of both an inner and an outer hull separated by only a few inches. After many minutes more of effort, the drill broke through into another empty space. Upon extending this opening and looking in, the research team were surprised to discover the interior to be well illuminated with sunlight. It was set of large rectangular window or porthole which had been cracked. These portholes were not visible from the outside, but were extended all the way around the compartment in huge curved rectangles and separated by only a thin structural brace between them. The exception was the cracked one by which the team gained entry; it had turned a milky translucent color like frosted glass. Later testing showed that the entire outer hull was covered in this transparent material that was then blocked off by an opaque inflatable skin barely thicker than four sheets of typing paper and yet direct blast from stagemasters would not dent or rupture this foil-like substance.

After experimentation with a long, thin rod used to probe at what location of the front or buttons inside, a panel in the lower hull extended down along where several like invisible seams and became a ramp leading up into the craft. Known nothing out provided no reply, the team obtained flashlight and other equipment and entered the disc-craft. The greatest discoveries were made on the lower level, dubbed the "cargo hold", but the team of investigators did not immediately find the closed door or hatch to this compartment. Instead they found themselves in a small circular chamber about the size of an elevator cab. A spiral ramp of very steep incline led up around a center post to the upper chamber dubbed the "flight deck". Since the team had already observed some details of this upper chamber and had observed the bodies of two (2) small creatures slumped in chairs, it was decided to investigate these first in case they might be alive.

Inside the upper cabin room the team found the bodies of two (2) small humanoids about four feet in height and strapped into seats like those in a jet cockpit (acceleration couches) which faced a row of instrument panels built into a curved counter-top circling the cabin just below the portholes. They had previously seen from outside. The extraterrestrials were dead. Later study determined that the normal atmosphere inside the cabin was much thinner and colder than our air. When the crack in the window frame happened the two (2) "pilots" died from sudden increase in pressure and temperature which caused their membranes like bruises and gave a brownish hue to their skin that first seemed like burns. The seats holding the bodies were found to adjust in tilt to fit about any human form and to glide around a track in the floor that followed the instrument panels.

The group soon recognized that the instrument panels were active and some symbols were backlit by a blue-green glow. Some of those were changing as they watched. At this point Dr. Oepholmer consulted with Dr. von Runnan and suggested that the team proceed with extreme caution since the craft was obviously still under some form of power and it might be activated into operation either by their interference or by electrical outaction from within or without by radio control. Dr. Love suggested that the team should explore the construction of the controls rather than attempt to operate them on the chance of being able to trace the power to its source and destination determined. This was agreed upon and the work began. As the first slide out like a drawer along nearly invisible lines less than 0.3 millimeters wide and in a track or rail composed of a single strip of plastic wrapped in a continuous "u" curve around two metal rollers at the front and rear. There were no ball bearings, springs or motors. And yet each drawer slid both open and shut at the slightest touch of a fingertip as if self-powered. Later it was found that the rear roller bar traveled back-and-forth on a track of its own as the drawer was operated. This second track was curved so as to balance the force imparted by the bond in the plastic strip and thus created an almost frictionless mechanism. The type of plastic was then unknown to earthly science, but has since been developed and has what is known as a "molecular memory" of its ideal unstressed state, to which it will naturally return. Later it was determined that each section of controls or instruments aboard this craft was self-contained as to its power needs, by some means interpreted into its nuclear structure that gathered electromagnetic and other energy from the space around it; in this case the fields of the Earth. There was no control power system anywhere on the ship and the control, flight and environmental systems drew their power from unknown sources. Instrumentation was essentially found to interconnect and communicate with each other on the molecular level by means of waves or vibrations set up in the atomic structures of each device. No wires or other recognizable electrical components were found.

The sections of the saucer hull which contained both upper and lower deck cabins were joined along microscopic lines by means of electromagnetic locking action engineered into their molecular structure. When Dr. Bush and a team of military engineers found several interlocking key-like devices in a cabinet built into the wall, Dr. Bellard determined that these could be used to disassemble the craft into sections. At the joints, the operator of the keys, which fitted together for different sized tasks, simply passed the tool over the seam. The device, which looked like a tuning fork and had each end in one direction and rejoined the sections when it was drawn in the other direction. Even after disassembly and prolonged operating capabilities to this day. All attempts to alter the magnetic fields that connect sections of the craft, performed with the use of powerful electromagnets under exacting laboratory conditions, have failed to change the degree of the interlocking effect. Also, kinetic force (repeated blows) has failed to alter molecular magnetic alignment according to crystal holographic imaging tests recently conducted.

The entire inner hull structure was built over a light-weight framework of flatbars beams supporting the two main cabin sections. The cabin sections were equal thirds around a single, central vertical shaft or pole running through the thickness of the craft and connecting the upper and lower hulls which also divided the craft into equal thirds. The pole running through the saucer was about forty-six (46) feet long and about sixteen (16) inches in diameter. It was a perfect cylinder of a solid carbon/zinc alloy. The pole maintained or stored in a vertical position, this pole has no special power capability. But when laid down at the Hart Canyon site on let's side, the pole began to drain electrical power from machines, generators and batteries and to broadcast a powerful magnetic field which damaged sensitive instruments and magnetized tools. For this reason, the pole had to be transported in an upright fashion.

Many other discoveries were made. During the past three different styles of writing: first, a form of symbolic pictographs, second, an alphabetic style of pictograph which seemed to break down the complex drawings into words, and third, a form that looked like the raised symbols in the Braille lettering for the blind but was not. Much later, Callhams and Friedman showed this last form to be a sort of mathematical code based on binary counting and read from right-to-left like Hebrew. But the most important discoveries were made on the lower level cabin, which was labeled the "cargo hold".

While attempting to take the apart the "cargo hold" in the lower entry chamber, the team discovered a hatchway which was closed so well that it was necessary to use a pry bar to pry it open and closed by touching a pictograph box on the wall beside it. This was curved to match the walls of the cabin. The first called the "central chamber" and later, the "central chamber" had no frame around it. The mechanism was currently planning to construct a technology adapted by study of this door mechanism. To utilize airlock chamber revealed like a geared heart or center of the lower cabin, until the two openings in the two cylinders lined up. The material was so thin that the opening in the two walls nearly went unseen. Inside the cargo hold were found a number of what appeared to be scientific work tables and medical examination tables. Just as Dr. Brook was about to suggest that the "cargo" routine carried might be a biological or human one, Dr. van Valkenberg found a number (14) of small laboratory chambers built into the wall beside a clam-shell couch that looked like it would close in on a human body. This couch was fitted with hoses for filling it with some liquid or gas when the two sections would come together and seal. A closer look at the sealed tubes which looked like the doors of clothes dryers at a laundromat revealed that they were a complex form of refrigeration system. This was empty and twelve contained the bodies of what looked like human adults and small children as well as infants, all frozen as if preserved for specimens.

The decision was made to remove these from what had now been nicknamed "the saucer" and pack them in ice for preservation until a later autopsy could determine if they were of any biological or earth humans.

In the process of transferring the frozen EBT bodies from their capsules, Dr. Brook, von Hoeller, Schorer and two Army pathologists, from the first team, managed to discover that one of the small humanoid adults, still in the "pilots" found deceased on the flight deck, had showed out with a pulse, limited respiration and had lived in an unconscious state for several minutes before expiring. The shocked scientists then realized that the capsules were actually cryogenic suspension chambers and that the EBT's were still technically alive inside them. Although this concept was almost unheard of in western medicine at that point in time, Dr. Brook dimly recalled reading about secret experiments conducted in Nazi concentration camps during the war. Such experiments had centered inhumanly on the suspending of the vital life signs and their resuscitation by freezing and thawing of the bodies of inmates who were used against their will in the laboratory animals.

By this time, the scientists had determined that each section of the ship was able to maintain some operating power even after disassembly. A test showed this to be true for the cryogenic capsules as well. Due to the lack of proper facilities at the landing site, and the lack of a secured holding area for any living EBT's, (or convalescent provisions) it was decided to remove the entire cryogenic section of the craft, and to relocate to a better research and medical laboratories on a military compound of some sort before attempting to restore any of the EBT's to consciousness. The story was quickly circulated that, "yes, bodies had been found - all deceased, and that these would be removed for later analysis. The bodies of the two small "pilots" were shown to some other members of the recovery team who heard about them, and then sealed in dry ice chambers, as was the corpse of the EBT who had expired in the cargo hold after thawing. A big display of dry ice transportation capsules were secretly loaded with diet and other before the entire group was loaded into a refrigerator truck labeled "High explosives" for transport. The rest of the craft, in pieces, was loaded onto flatbed trucks, covered with tarpaulins and labeled "high explosives". Dr. Oppenheimer arranged for full use and needed remodeling of the Navy Auxiliary Airfield complex at Los Alamos Base. The country proceeded at night and by the most unobserved route possible, to these facilities, while units of the 1st/MAJIGOPS team assisted by Army Airborne "Temper" stayed at the Hart Canyon site to effect final clean-up operations. The disassembled ship and was put into secured storage for analysis on 5 April 1968.

Two separate laboratories were set up at the Los Alamos site. One was for the detailed photographing and cataloging of each component of the disassembled and the effort to decipher the forms of writing found onboard. The second facility was organized around the efforts of teams of doctors. Neither group knew what was the purpose or progress of the other's research. Only Dr. Oppenheimer was in a position, acting as go-between, to see all phases of the work in progress and to disseminate the findings of each to the appropriate investigators within each group. This was done in order to limit the risk of information reaching the public and causing a panic situation based upon a fear of undetectable aliens among them. The thought of riots and murders was on everyone's mind. The thought

Eventually, the medical team was able to resuscitate one adult Earth-like humanoid male and three (2) Earth-like humanoid infants, all about six (6) months of age; two male and one female. The rest of the infants and one more short, gear-shinned, large-headed humanoid EBE, perished in the attempt to revive them. This was largely the result of Dr. S. Brock and Bush having decided to experiment first on the infants, who were of little intelligence value. In the hope of reviving the short EBE and the adult humanoid for a detailed debriefing.

The adult, Earth-like humanoid male turned out to be, himself, an EBE. But he spoke perfect English with a slight and untraceable accent and exhibited many telepathic and psychic skills as well. This EBE was, in his general appearance, completely human; internally, there were only slight differences in the formation of the heart valves, pancreas, lungs and he possessed two livers and an unfamiliar organ where the gall bladder would be in an earthman. Also, his digestive and gastro-intestinal systems were simpler but less able to process the wide range of foods that earthmen are used to. He was surprised to discover the scientists had unfrozen him alive, but was otherwise undisturbed to find himself in the company of earthmen. He stated within minutes of regaining consciousness that his only surprise would have been if the investigators had not chosen to "hold as captive out of your hands curiosity". After a hasty tele-conference with President Truman, it was explained to the visitor that if his intentions proved to be non-hostile and he cooperated in an information exchange, he would be granted diplomatic status and soon be repatriated to his own kind when the arrangement could be made. To this he readily agreed, provided he was not asked to give away any scientific secrets that could alter the course of our natural cultural development.

All together, the Aztec EBE lived under our protective custody on the low Alamosa complex for nearly a full year, from late April 1948 - until March of 1949. After that, he was sequestered at a private safehouse set-up by Army intelligence in rural Vermont, during which time he met with the President and other top government and military administrators, prior to his being returned to his people in August of 1949. He gave the scientists and military observers a great deal of mostly non-technical information about his civilization and its motives for being on our Earth; a total of six hundred and eighty-three (683) pages of transcripts were made of recorded conversations. A condensed version of some noteworthy points from these many debriefing sessions follows at the end of this section.

The EBE was little help in allowing us to keep the remains of his space craft for study, since he felt our understanding of it would only gradually develop. He did suggest that his people would probably have to drop one in either condition in the 10th of the Soviet Union - just for the balance of things to be established, and "you are welcome to take this up with any higher authority you can find willing to listen to you. If you do not approve of this course". The team of scientists were told that the human-like infants were destined for our world anyway, and we were welcome to keep them. On 21 August 1949, the Aztec EBE was returned to his own kind at a meeting site southwest of Riverside Air Force Base, Texas, and arrangements were made for a future meeting at the same location, in open diplomatic relations.

CONDENSED CONVERSATIONS WITH THE AZTEC, NEW MEXICO

EXTRATERRESTRIAL BIOLOGICAL ENTITY
(From April, 1948-to-March, 1949)

The following conversations were held over an eleven (11) month interval between various interrogators, labeled here as INT, and the Aztec EBE. These are reduced from many hours of recorded debriefing, and are included here to give the reader a degree of insight into the character and the personality of the subject. These statements are not intended to provide complete answers to questions. All transcripts of the debriefing and the original tape recordings of the same are available through special request [and with proper clearance] from the DIA office of counterintelligence or the MAJIDORS-10, code: "DIOGCR COMMAND", re: "PROJECT AQUARI". These may be procured through the EXCOMCON-REF Liaison office at the Pentagon's Joint Strategic Objectives Staff Division (National Defense Section).

INT: "That shall we call you, what is your name in your native language?"

EBE: "Oh! How even that isn't easy for me because you will not get the phonetic pronunciations correct without practice. And I am not able to write it down for you because we do not use an alphabetic printed language that I could translate to English easily."

INT: "Why don't you try it out on us anyway?"

EBE: "Of course! Symbols (or Setlmas, or Seth-the-mous) will do; that is the first of four names I am known by. In our written language, this would be shown by a single graphic symbol that would explain my entire lineage."

INT: "Why is your written language so different from ours?"

EBE: "Why is yours so different from the Egyptian of thirty centuries ago! forgive me, but that is not a simple problem. The group I belong to gave up any identification with any one planet, or its culture, before your people learned to make fire. There were once thousands of languages, both oral and written, in our many civilizations. It became important to use symbols to represent whole words and even concepts that all of us held in common. Soon your culture will do the same with public signboards at first. Travel and intercommunications of many peoples will always cause this to happen."

INT: "Why are you here?"

EBE: "Specifically to bring you these children. And we like trees."

INT: "Would you mind expanding on that?"

EBE: "Certainly! In what direction? You see, we would have to see you bio-up such a pretty little planet to rule so many nice trees. If you only know how hard it is to make a tree from scratch! People are easy - they follow naturally, but not without trees, of course. Green things must be respected above all else except children, and are very much alike."

INT: "What are the intentions of your government by sending you here? WHO sent you and WHY? If this isn't the first time, evidenced by your familiarity with English, why haven't there been official contacts made?"

EBE: "(Sigh) In reverse order! That) and be strong-up from one of those beautiful trees? Why? Because you sent us an invitation we could not resist, for our own curiosity, as well as safety. We sent ourselves, or I volunteered - take your pick. And we have no government; we outlived it, or rather we outgrew it. I suppose you can not outlaw a thing without law, and those require governments, do they not?"

INT: "I don't understand."

EBE: "I know that. Try laughing. You still will not understand, but you will feel better about your ignorance."

INT: "But that's not good enough! Make me understand!"

EBE: "It will have to suffice. One can not teach until a student wants to learn. How good do you want us to be? I will not harm you. We will not harm you or interfere anymore than you want us to. We are only here to offer what you asked for in a manner we know you will accept; and you did ask us to come and visit."

INT: "When? Who sent for you? Who invited you?"

EBE: "Almost fifty of your years ago! you sent us signals. You were looking for us, and you scared us with a signal you should not have been capable of sending. So we answered. But you didn't understand our answer then, just as you don't now. We do our best to please others, just as you don't respond to our message to you, and you did not come for a visit, we felt that we really ought to stop by and see how you were doing. It has been a long time, and it was the neighborly thing to do, of course. Besides, it was right on the way to another destination; your world, I make it."

INT: "You've been here before?"

EBE: "I know! We were surprised that you had forgotten us!"

INT: "I don't see how we could forget you! Are you serious?"

EBC: "Very seldom. But, yes, your culture, which now dominates this civilization, did forget us. Actually, your people seem to have undergone a period of history in which you were so afraid of old truths, that you erased them in favor of religious fantasy. Some of your people remembered us orally in their legends, such as those who speak the kabball, Karmayessett, or Alphaspan dialects. They lived where we last visited. But the high point of their cultures is long passed."

INT: "I've never heard of them."

EBC: "Not surprising, your history shows that the conqueror seldom preserves any history of their victims. I speak of the natives in this land mass; those called Indians; mostly on your eastern and southern borders and in the ribbon of land that connects you to the southern continent. Navahosi Attack! Inca? The Greeks? and Teotec's culture? These were all greater than your own civilization at a time when you were burning witches and killing their cats, which brought a plague that killed millions of your ancestors. Of course, you drove them mad and destroyed them with venereal diseases and smallpox; those you didn't slaughter for their gold."

INT: "Oh."

EBC: "And your social pundits speculate and joke about why we don't land in front of your nation's capital building and shake hands? We are different, not, inahash!"

INT: "But we have changed. Western civilization is now the leader in this world; for freedom and humanity."

EBC: "I'm sure that, first, we believe that, or we wouldn't be here now. Also, tell that to the millions of Hebrews your Western civilization has destroyed in the past decade, or the millions of Negro families whose sons died to stop the Redden Hitler, but who do not have plumbing in their homes as we speak. Yes, you make progress; that is hopeful for you. But emotionally you are very different from us. Not but you are very different and frightening to us. We are trying to learn to overcome those differences before your runaway technology thrusts you upon us without choice."

INT: "We have no space travel capability, how could we harm you?"

EBC: "In our terms, you are very close to that point. Do you have small children? Yes! Well, they will grow up in a world where space travel is taken for granted. And before they make you a grandfather, earthmen will be in space."

INT: "All right, so you have been visiting us for some time. I have no choice but to accept that, even though I'd love some proof. But you still didn't tell me who sent you the message from Earth that brought you back here?"

EBC: "Funny you should connect those two subjects! If you dig in a place I will show to you on any world map, you will find your proof. Unfortunately, I am now in the wrong country for this, but others of my people will instruct the proper government to dig there if you do not mind. You see, in a remote part of the nation you call Yugoslavia, we visited and helped the people there to build a very advanced culture over seven thousand years ago. It will be found. But there is a beautiful mystery in the fact that the person who sent us your first message forty-nine years ago (1995) did come from this nation originally. His transmission was sent from near here, however, in the state you call Colorado."

INT: "Can you tell us his name? Are there any other proofs of your earlier visits?"

EBC: "Thousands of proofs, if you look around. The scientist I spoke of was an electrical researcher named Nikola Tesla. You are old enough to have heard of him when he was still alive. You know, I just thought of a very good puzzle for someone of you to solve on an island you named the Isle of Flies in your Pacific Ocean, you will find what is left of a concrete landing platform we built there one hundred and fifteen (115) of your centuries ago. You can not miss finding that, since the footings we put down still cover many acres. Look for those if you would like to see our own planet could have built them at that time. It would be fun for me if you ever locate them, because my great-grandfather helped to pour the mortar for them!"

INT: "What? How long do your people live?"

EBC: "Somewhat too long, I think at times. We have built-up our age somewhat. It would vary, but I was alive when your whole continent was practically a question-mark on the sea charts."

INT: "What about these babies we found with you? Are they human?"

EBC: "Kafsa them, of course, as I would have done. Certainly they are human; perhaps more-so depending on whose definition we use. You are too far away from understanding the whole science of bio-engineering yet for this to be sensible, but just accept that we have sown the seeds of a rich harvest for your culture. And this will continue. They are only children, not monsters. But raise them well, please, because the care of children is one of a few things we do not laugh about."

INT: "I remember this man, Tesla, you spoke of; he died during the war (1943), but I never heard that he tried to contact other worlds."

EBC: "It was in all the papers, along with the story of how he was always being taken to court by his neighbors for creating lightning which struck their properties. Besides, when Tesla wouldn't answer, we sent a reply to your great forecaster, Marton, that we had arrived for a visit."

INT: "Really? When was this? I'm sure he never reported it!"

EBC: "You see how you hear, but don't really listen? Again, it made all the papers. We'd just arrived here in, oh, 1920 or '23 (it was 1922), and we sent him the letter X in his own code. It meant that he had visitors! He told everyone that he knew for certain that the signal came from outer space, but nobody really listened. Well, after that we began to figure out that your man Tesla was way ahead of the rest of your scientists. Even by accident, he shouldn't have learned how to do what he did in his lifetime."

INT: "Why did it take twenty years for you to answer Tesla's message?"

EBC: "It did not. We answered it immediately! Oh! I see! Our arrival took twenty-two (22) years, not twenty, because that's how long it takes to get here from where we were when we got Tesla's invitation."

INT: "So long! You took such a far journey just to find us, and didn't even contact us?"

EBC: "As I said, it was on the way to somewhere else we were planning to visit anyway. Besides, how long or far is all relative, is it not, when we live as long as we do? And you do not see even now that we always live in space. We outgrew our origin worlds many generations ago. In fact, you have to try and understand that you are really living in space too. The only difference is that we left our natural planet and built a new home to go where we wanted. You did the same thing when you left your caves and built huts; and for the same reason. So it's all relative."

INT: "But why not contact us after such a journey?"

EBC: (laughing) "I am sorry! But you still do not see! We did contact you. We are contacting you; all to the limits of your ability to hear our message. I keep telling you that it is relative! Please! Laugh about it! I am trying to explain a limit to your perception which is caused by your limited perceptibility. Do you see the wonderful paradox?"

INT: "If you say so, but such a trip has no purpose in our way of seeing things."

EBC: "Of course not. That is why we do what we do. Listen now, because this could go on forever if you do not. We are at how many ever we pick our efforts. It is done by any standards you could apply! We are confused because this area of space is one we reach regularly as a simple matter of course, like your lands and vegetation at the same place every year. Suddenly we find our camping site threatened by bears! But bears are protected, you are not supposed to hurt them; so you must tame them or give up the whole vacation. Do you see that although you are a long way from travel to other stars, by our standards, you will be overruling the whole area by the mere flow of your past by here? Do you see why it is vital, unless you destroy yourselves first, for us to see you now before you come to us? Would you let strange headhunters roam the streets of a city without sanding them to school first? We cannot interfere with you anymore than you would interfere with bears in your park. Somebody we would rather you joined us, visited our worlds where we do make camp, and joined us on our long voyage of discovery. Or not. It is your destiny, as long as you do not try and alter ours. Try and grow into our perspective, and all the illogic you question will seem very reasonable. It is all a matter of scale. Centuries instead of decades. Someday you will be just about like us, and you will see. Some new, short-lived species will think you are a crazy metaphysical paradox too. And you will have to learn to treat them gently as children, without letting your eyes get in the way."

INT: "But with your science, you could make any world your own personal paradise; why live in spacehips?"

EBC: "Yes, and with our weapons we could take what we want as well. But why have one world when you can see them all? You all covet land, a very old idea and only natural when the supply is limited. Just try to accept that we are in a paradise when we are seeing and understanding something new. Our god is change and our religion is understanding more. Our god is the greatest social challenge and purpose. Searching for truth up your age, this will become as clear to you as why you must breathe air."

INT: "It sounds like yours is the ideal, perfect world."

EBC: "No. When you have more years, filling them profitably is a real problem. And the trouble with being a loving species is that you want to prove it by making more of your kind with a partner you love. Of course this must be closely regulated in a culture such as ours, and so relationships of an intimate nature are difficult to leave to one's heart."

"You speak of the heart being the seat of emotions. This is a concept we use on Earth, but we know it to be a sort of romantic fiction. Why does an advanced race like yours maintain such a notion?"

INT:

ESC:

"Well, I used that particular expression for your benefit. But why do you object to romanticizing your species as well? By fiction also except romantic vision. Why not ours as well? Certainly our way of life must seem romantic to you! It does to us. We write poems and express ourselves with words of art just as you do. Many of the greatest works of construction on your world were inspired by a joyful effort of our people and yours, in your distant past. We leave those whatever we go. And you romantic creatures have tried for many generations to explain why such huge monuments to human engineering were ever built in the first place. Why, they were built to express the joy of living, of course! And the great sense of satisfaction our people have gotten from working side-by-side with yours has been one of our biggest joys in life. That is another reason for our being here. Surely even a small child can understand such joy?"

INT:

"You keep talking about a message for us. Can you define that a little more?"

EEI:

"We simply are. We have no deeper purpose than to be. We do not wish direct contact with your people. You would reject us in your present frame of mind. So we seek to be accepted at the lowest level possible, and hence the broadest one possible. That is as a cultural myth; we seek to be the next sense clues to put it bluntly. This must come to your people, from your people. The understanding will be given you by the wisdom perception skills of those children we are bringing you. For your sakes this must not come from political or religious leaders. It must flow evenly throughout all the common cultures of the Earth. The message is not that we are here, but that each of you can control where you are going. Be like us, or different; as you choose. But you choose. Not your political leaders who believe that only a tiny percent of the elite can rule wisely over their masses; or those who spread fear of death in order to enrich their lives through religion. Knowledge is only good when spread like seeds from which wisdom might grow; and faith has purpose only when it is not created of fear. With faith in the wisdom of truth, and in each other, your world will come to ours soon enough. Our hope is to be able to receive you as friends and equals when you arrive. That is our mission. You must do the work for yourselves. If you do, you will keep all the rewards."

ASSESSMENT OF THE SITUATION

In any attempt to properly assess the present situation as it relates to the issue of national security or the risk of cultural upheaval, it is important to take full advantage of hindsight and historical retrospective. It is both an interesting footnote of history and a key point of reference that the human race itself is directly responsible for its being contacted in this century by beings from other worlds.

Through dialogues with representatives of these alien pilots of the flying discs, we have learned that our own scientific curiosity led to the violations which have been ongoing throughout this century.

In 1899, the Yugoslav electrical scientist, Nikola Tesla, most noted for his introduction of alternating current to electrical power transmission and for a laboratory device named after him (the Tesla coil) embarked on a series of experiments that have made this the saucer century. Tesla had long suspected that it was possible to directly broadcast pure electrical energies at a distance without loss of power and without wires. By 1899, and with the aid of government and private scientific backing, Tesla had chosen a site near Colorado Springs, Colorado to conduct a massive and never repeated experiment. Nikola Tesla's purpose was to gather the Earth's own magnetic field and to use the Earth as a huge transmitter to send signals to outer space in an attempt to contact whoever might be living there. Tesla had no idea that the specific type of power he had generated was coursing through space and around great hazy light years away. Modern science has all but forgotten Tesla's work. The series of energies and magnetic waves he was working with were never fully defined or explained and almost all of his original notions are lost or were destroyed by their creator in his later years. But it is now obvious that this single action by a scientific genius generated serious concerns among the other intelligences in the near reaches of our galaxy. Although others have attempted to use radio waves to broadcast messages into outer space, none used the energies that Tesla did.

We have now determined by discussion with the extraterrestrials who have contacted this government since 1947 that the type of power Tesla used is a very important form of energy. It has apparently been largely overlooked by modern electrical engineers and physicists although certain information gathered by the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) indicates a strong program of research of this type inside the Soviet Union. According to the alien sources we have interviewed, Tesla's work was a technical fluke at least one hundred years ahead of its time. Development of these energy fields will only implicitly occur after we have fully understood lesser beam devices.

The extraterrestrials have reportedly been visiting and regularly monitoring the progress of life on Earth for thousands of our years and they were very concerned about this odd signal we sent courting through space. Among other things, it seems that these energy waves can disturb the process of protein, alter weather patterns and damage ozone levels in whatever planets atmosphere they might encounter.

NO DISSEMINATION ON DECLASSIFICATION

Evidently, Tesla was sending huge amounts of an unknown form of energy into space along with his intended signals but was unable to detect them due to the fact that instruments for their measurement did not and do not now exist.

The extraterrestrial intelligences (ETIs) attempted to respond to his transmissions in a form of binary code that they routinely use for long range communications (evidently these energies act instantly at a distance and are not limited to the speed of light) and ask that he cease sending. Of course, Tesla had no way of understanding the message he received back from space. Fortunately, the anger of local residents at the side effects of his research forced him to shut down the Colorado Springs experiments in the same year he began them.

This, then, was the actual start of the so-called "flying saucer age" in our times. As it became clear that our people were on the verge of an exploitation of technical progress, the ETIs decided on a long term program of carefully calculated and seemingly random contact with the eventual goal of raising our awareness of our place in the galactic community. With the advent of the Atomic Age, this program was escalated to include eventual diplomatic contact with many of Earth's governments. The same approach of staging apparent "accidental" contact was chosen for its low psychological impact on the human race. This was the situation in the case of the United States of America (re: Roswell and Atee, New Mexico files, this briefing).

The problem with direct contact was stated early in our relationship by one of the extraterrestrial biological entities (ETB's). "Alight now there are people on this planet who do not know that your moon circles your world or how long it takes your world to orbit your star (sun). I am not speaking of a small number, but perhaps as many as half of the global population. We have been mistaken for being gods or devils in your past and this sort of slow education is best. As a cultural myth, we stand the best chance of acceptance by the masses of your citizens."

There are now hundreds of compiled studies of the ETBs, their words and their objectives. In several cases, volunteers from our armed forces have participated in diplomatic and cultural exchanges during the 1970's and early 1980's and have visited some of the ETB's worlds. The following is a short assessment of the situation as we now understand it.

o There are four basic types of ETBs so far confirmed:
And they are listed here in descending order of their influence on our studies.

A. Earth-like humanoid. There are several variations more-or-less like ourselves. The majority of these are friendly and are the bulk of our ETB contacts. Most have a high degree of psychic ability and all use science and engineering of an advanced nature.

B. Small humanoid or "Grey". The Greys, so-called for the hue of skin possessed by most of this type, are a sort of drone. They are not unlike the worker ants or bees. They are a type of genetic clone incapable of sexual reproduction. With little or no independent will, they are mostly under the psychic control of the Earth-like humanoids who raise them like pets (or a kind of slave). A detailed explanation of this cultural oddity and its role in the form of space travel these EEEs employ is addressed elsewhere in this briefing. Assuming the Greys are under benign control, they are harmless.

C. Non-humanoid EEEs. These are in several classes and come from worlds where dominant morphology took a different evolutionary course. Many of these are dangerous not for organized hostile intentions, but because such creatures do not hold human life as sacred. To them, we are animals despite our intelligence. A few are friendly because their cultures forbid all acts against living creatures. Thus far, contact has been minimal with only a handful of unfortunate encounters.

B. Transworldic Entities. Of all the forms of EEE studied so far by Operation Majestic, these are the most difficult to understand or even to give a description of. Essentially, such entities are not "beings" or "creatures". They exist in some other dimension or plane which is to say not in our space or time. They do not use devices to travel in space. Only once has a member of an M-12 contact team been privileged to be present when introduced by an Earth-like EEE to a TE. In essence these entities are composed of pure mind energy. They are not unlike "ghostly spirits" and seem to be only curious about our universe. They are said (by other EEEs) to be capable of taking on any physical form that they "channel" their energy into as matter.

e The principal means of travel used by the humanoid EEE is of a mechanical nature and involves very large craft that cement land on a planet. These employ the forms of energy discovered accidentally by Nikola Tesla to cause themselves to be thrust from or pulled towards the stars they wish to visit. Some alteration or control of the passage of time aboard the interstair craft is used as well.

e Since the huge interstair (between stars) craft cannot approach the powerful gravity and magnetic fields of the stars from which they draw their power, they are placed into a "parking orbit" far outside the planetary family (solar system) of any star they approach. This may be millions of miles from the world the EEEs wish to visit. Smaller "craft" often get out always disc-shaped, are used to travel the distances remaining. These draw their power and propel themselves by use of "electrogravity". This is a means of balancing a gravity wave against an electromagnetic wave in a manner that generates a third kind of wave similar to that which governs their larger vessels.

This journey between worlds takes place in the shell craft, and the humanoid EEEs suspend the effects of aging by freezing themselves in shell chambers. The psychic powers of the humanoid EEEs are not lessened during this "state of suspended animation", so they are still able to control their craft. Towards the end and to provide for some external control over "unforeseeable circumstances while frozen, the humanoid EEEs developed a host/parasite culture thousands of years ago with the small "Grey" EEE's. Since then, these Greys have become an extension of their controller's senses to such a degree that more humanoid EEEs rely heavily on their use at all times. "They are not unlike the symbiotic empathy between a pack of hunting dogs or a team of horses, and their earthly masters - simply like tools or partners in work," explained one EEE.

e During the current wave of interest in our planet by the EEE's, there have been three interstair craft, or "mother ships" stationed outside our solar system. These have been rotated at twenty-two (22) year intervals since the early 1960's. During a contact debriefing in 1964, an EEE explained that this was no hardship for them. "Our genetic science is about where yours will be in another millions or two. Although the basic grasp of engineering the DNA will come within another eighty (80) years or so, if you survive as a species. Our friends will still be living when we return home. And most of us bring our families with us so we can watch our children mature." Their family structure is very different from ours and often includes several "units" of each sex of parents, specifically engineered to produce offspring of certain mental character adapted to different physical forms needed in their culture. All of these live together as a family unit often as many as would be in a small village or neighborhood in our civilization.

Onboard the "mother ship" almost every race and culture is represented. There is no recognizable form of government behind the actions of these representatives from many worlds. It has been explained that as any species evolves physically, it evolves mentally or spiritually. The outcome of this process is that any form of political organizing, including the politics of religious structure, becomes a "personal moral transgression" of higher shame to any who practice such pervails, than any good that could come from them. Although this attitude makes any discussion of their faith or beliefs nearly impossible, it has become very clear that most races capable of interstellar travel support the principles of self-determination. In short that there is no empire of conquerors threatening our planet. "A little cross-cultural nudge, like urging a small child to walk towards you, is o.k. But these guys wouldn't let Darth Vader sweep their streets," as a member of a Majestic diplomatic task group put it after several years of analysis of contacts.

Many volumes could be written and have been on the details of this on-going contact process. Much of the contact of individual citizens by controlling such contact. The pattern developing, however, seems to indicate that a course of action is not directly needed. Little threat to national security has occurred. In fact, the EEC's have informed us that we are a sort of "protectorate" not unlike a wildlife preserve in their eyes. They will not protect us from ourselves, but are not interested in making us become like them either. There do appear to be forces in outer space that are hostile in the sense that they would exploit us although not conquer us. And we have been informed that a large part of the alien presence on Earth is to insulate us from doing any damage to the alien's own culture until we are more morally evolved as a species. With these things in mind we arrive at a statement of official position.

STATEMENT OF POSITION

"In so far as no threat, either implied nor expressed and either of a military, civil or societal nature has been forwarded by the violation of the association of visiting extraterrestrials against the governments and the peoples of these United States of America; and in so far as great and many cultural and technical advances have been derived by such exchange, we hereby grant full, complete diplomatic status and recognition to these individuals from beyond our world. Furthermore, let it be known that we seek to provide shelter, comfort and aid in all their peaceful endeavors to far as there are respective of the laws of our land and the right to self-determination and free will expressed in our national constitution. And until such time as the objectives or methods of either parties in this agreement shall deem otherwise, this bond between our peoples shall remain in effect."

4053589

The preceding diplomatic treaty was drafted by the directorate of the MAJESTIC-13 operation and a joint committee of extra-terrestrial visitors and representatives of the U.S. Diplomatic Corps, as a statement of intent. It was ratified and signed at Kirtland Air Force Base, Texas on July the eighteenth, 1954 by President Dwight D. Eisenhower and an individual on the behalf of the EEC's.

Each subsequent holder of the executive office has continued to uphold the intent of this policy towards these aliens.

Beyond the statement of intent, basic agreement has been reached on the following negotiated issues:

- The extraterrestrials will refrain where and when possible from open display of their presence to the public at large.
- The extraterrestrials will submit substantiating proof and listings of all persons contacted from among the public at large or that have been removed from the Earth for purpose of contact or cultural exchange. In no case shall anyone abducted by the EEC's be subjected to knowing harm or kept against their will for longer than forty-eight (48) hours.
- The extraterrestrials will avoid any willful contact with representatives of the public news media, or any private investigators of the UFO phenomenon, groups or writers dedicated to the same intentions.
- The U.S. government will provide through the defense Logistics Agency's Reutilization and Marketing Service such items as needed for the personal comfort of those visiting EEC's who may be sequestered in its care.
- The U.S. government will provide a section of the MAJESTIC headquarters base in Nevada as an embassy compound for the EEC visitors and equip it to their needs.
- Any exchange of technical, scientific or social information will be conducted item-for-item and in such manner as to assure that both parties have equal gain from the process.

Except for many factoring details which are available under separate cover through either operation Majestic (MAJESTIC) or the Defense Intelligence Agency's Office of Comersintelligence, this concludes the assessment of the situation and statement of position section of this preliminary briefing paper.
